

There was a man made of clockwork who longed to become human so he could watch over his master.

prompt: There was a man made of clockwork who longed to become human so he could watch over his master. painting by arthur rackham, seed: 8

When the master was away he would set himself in a clockwork suit and go out hunting, and when he returned the suit would be in motion and he would be caught.

prompt: When the master was away he would set himself in a clockwork suit and go out hunting, and when he returned the suit would be in motion and he would be caught. painting by arthur rackham, seed: 11

But the huntsman had a faithful servant who was always ready to do his bidding, and when the suit was set in motion he would run to the door and give the alarm. Then the man would set himself free, but the huntsman would pursue him, and shoot him down as he ran.

prompt: The huntsman had a faithful servant who was always ready to do his bidding. When the suit was set in motion he would run to the door and give the alarm. Then the man would set himself free, but the huntsman would painting by arthur rackham, seed: 18

But the faithful servant, who was called Dummling, always stood by and watched, and when his master was caught he said: 'It is all over with the man! He is dead!'

prompt: But the faithful servant, who was called Dummling, always stood by and watched, and when his master was caught he said: 'It is all over with the man! He is dead!' painting by arthur rackham, seed: 29

And the huntsman, who was in a great hurry, said: "I only ran into him to get away from you, Dummling."

prompt: And the huntsman, who was in a great hurry, said: "I only ran into him to get away from you, Dummling." painting by arthur rackham, seed: 44

And then the man was so frightened that he stood still and did not move an inch. And the huntsmen looked at each other for a moment and thought: 'He is quite safe,' and went away to their quarters. But the man, who was still in the clockwork suit, went outside and called: 'huntsman, give me liberty or I shall set myself free.'

prompt: The huntsmen looked at each other for a moment and thought: 'He is quite safe,' and went away to their quarters. But the man, who was still in the clockwork suit, went outside and called: painting by arthur rackham, seed: 63

'Ah, you rascal!' said the huntsman. 'What do you take me for? Do you think I am a child? I have had a good deal of trouble to get here, and if I had not set myself free you would have run me down.'

prompt: 'Ah, you rascal!' said the huntsman. 'What do you take me for? Do you think I am a child? I have had a good deal of trouble to get here, and if I had not set myself free you would have run me down.' painting by arthur rackham, seed: 86

Then he went his way and the man, with the gun in his hand, was so frightened he stood still.

prompt: Then he went his way and the man, with the gun in his hand, was so frightened he stood still. painting by arthur rackham, seed: 113

The huntsmen looked on for a moment, and thought: 'He is safe,' and went their way. But the next day the man came again and again said: ' huntsman, do give me liberty, or I shall kill you.'

prompt: The huntsmen looked on for a moment, and thought: 'He is safe,' and went their way. But the next day the man came again and again said: ' huntsman, do give me liberty, or I shall kill you.' painting by arthur rackham, seed: 144

And this time the huntsman gave him the slip, and the man caught him and killed him.

prompt: And this time the huntsman gave him the slip, and the man caught him and killed him. painting by arthur rackham, seed: 179

Then the faithful servant went to the dead man's house and gave him all the money he had and bought himself a clockwork horse and rode home on it.

prompt: Then the faithful servant went to the dead man's house and gave him all the money he had and bought himself a clockwork horse and rode home on it. painting by arthur rackham, seed: 218

And when the master came home he was very angry, and said: " You wicked wretch! You have killed my little Dumpling and set me free, but I will kill you too."

prompt: And when the master came home he was very angry, and said: " You wicked wretch! You have killed my little Dummling and set me free, but I will kill you too." painting by arthur rackham, seed: 261

Then he called his huntsmen, and said to them: "You rascals, why did you let my little Dummlings live? You shall both die!" And they were all ready to kill him, but he begged and said: "Only give me my little Dummy's ring, and when I am dead you may have it."

prompt: He called his huntsmen, and said to them: "You rascals, why did you let my little Dummlings live? You shall both die!" And they were all ready to kill him, but he painting by arthur rackham, seed: 308

Now the huntsmen had not got the ring, and were afraid to give it to him, but the little Dummlings had it, and they took him prisoner and put him in the clock-suit and put a gun into his hand and said: go, my friend, and take me with you.

prompt: The huntsmen had not got the ring, and were afraid to give it to him, but the little Dummings had it. They took him prisoner and put him in the clock-suit. painting by arthur rackham, seed: 359

‘No,’ said he, ‘I will not take you with me, for I have not the ring.’ They were afraid, and said he had no need to take the ring, for he had killed their little friend Dumpling first.

prompt: 'No,' said he, 'I will not take you with me, for I have not the ring.' They were afraid, and said he had no need to take the ring, for he had killed their little friend Dummling first. painting by arthur rackham, seed: 414

Then they cut him down and took the money and the horse, and went their ways. But the little Dummy went to his father and mother, and they were very glad to have him back, and said how well he had behaved.

prompt: Then they cut him down and took the money and the horse, and went their ways. But the little Dummy went to his father and mother, and they were very glad to have him back, and said how well he had behaved. painting by arthur rackham, seed: 473

And the father said: 'He has been a faithful and good servant to us, and we have never known what we should have done without him.'

prompt: And the father said: 'He has been a faithful and good servant to us, and we have never known what we should have done without him.'
painting by arthur rackham, seed: 536